Effects of Eyestrain

A few of the many symptoms of eyestrain are dry, itchy, or inflamed eyes, pain in eyeball, eyes tire easily, dizziness, headache, sick-headache—made worse by shopping, riding on cars—cross eyes etc., etc.; and by its constant drain upon the nervous system eyestrain is one of the great disturbers of good health. The cause of eyestrain is an imperfectly developed eyeball and the only way to stop it is by the constant wear of properly fitted glasses. My business is fitting glasses to correct the full defect and stop all eyestrain. My next date at Dr. Merrill's office is Monday, March 15.

Mrs. Hilda Thompson of Berkeley is spending the season with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Spencer.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Fernald of South Paris, Maine are enroute from the East for a visit with their friends, Dr. and Mrs. W. I. Merrill. They are expected to arrive in the near future.

G. H. Hubbard has purchased a ranch at Dehli, five miles south east of Turlock, and has gone there to make their home. Their many friends at Campbell will join with the Press in wishing them success.

J. W. Tawney and son, Henry made a land seeking trip into Calaveras county last week. They were well pleased with the country and will probably return there in the near future, with the idea of locating out from Valley Springs.

August Jorgenson arrived from San Diego Wednesday, and left yesterday for his ranch at Chittenden where he will set out about 400 apricot and other trees. Mr. Jorgenson is well pleased with the Southland and the children like it very well.

The officers of Charity Lodge F. & A. M. were guests of Santa Clara Liberty Lodge Thursday evening and conferred the third degree. After the work, a banquet was served at which a number of short talks were given. One of the speakers refered to one of the more healthy looking visitors as "all wool and a yard wide." No names, please. About 35 of the Campbell members went over in autos.

Last Passenger Pigeon Dies

The last surviving passenger pigeon died at the Cincinnati Zoological Garden on September 1, 1914. This particular bird was a female and was hatched in captivity twenty-two years ago. The specimen has for many years been the only living bird to represent the millions of these birds that formerly existed in the eastern and middle states. A standing reward of a large sum of money for the past five years has failed to bring forth any clue as to the existence of any living passenger pigeon.

The immense numbers of passenger pigeons which at one time existed in the eastern United States was one of the greatest zoological wonders in the world. Alexander Wilson, one of the pioneers of American ornithology, tells of a breeding place of these pigeons in Shelbyville, Kentucky, which was several miles in breadth and was said to be more than forty miles in extent. Over one hundred nests were to be found in a single tree, and the ground was strewn with broken limbs of trees, eggs and dead squabs. In speaking of a flight of these birds he says that during one afternoon he estimated that the continuous flock overhead contained at least 2,230,272,000 pigeons.

After there became a market demand for these birds, market hunters destroyed them by the thousands and carloads were shipped to the market in New York and other large cities. "At the great nesting places both Indians and white men felled the trees in such a way that the larger trees in falling broke down the smaller ones and threw the helpless squabs to the ground. The squabs were gathered, their heads pulled off, their bodies thrown into sacks, and large droves of hogs were turned in to fatten on those which could not be used." From ten to thirty dozen were often caught at one time in a bird net.

In 1878 the birds were greatly reduced in numbers and the last great slaughter for the market occurred in Michigan during this year. It has been estimated that three hundred tons of birds were sent to the market in 1878. Birds were still to be seen on the market in Chicago as late as 1886, and small flocks were seen in 1895. But later than 1906 we have no record.

It is no wonder, therefore, that the death of a singie bird should have caused so much interest the world over. The bird itself was presented to the National Museum, where it will be useful in teaching a lesson to coming generations. The death of this pigeon typifies the complete extermination of a valuable resource of our country. It should forever teach us that our wild life is ours only in trust and that we owe much to succeeding generations. Our own wild pigeon, the band-tailed pigeon, with much the same habits as the passenger pigeon, received no protection until the Federal Migratory Bird Law was passed. We trust that this needed protection has not come too late to save this valuable species as a member of our fauna.

Santa Clara County Day

Santa Clara County day was a record breaker at the Exposition Friday and the throngs of blossom laden Merry Makers established a reputation which will cause others to sit up and take notice. An immense automobile parade formed at Twenty-fifth and Valenica Streets in San Francisco and rolled down Market street to the music of the bands. The Southern Pacific ran crowded special trains carrying boosters from all parts of the county. Blossoms were in evidence everywhere and by this the visitors from the county were recognized. Everybody wore flowers and badges.

Special dedicatory exercises were held at the county booth in the California building and a dansant was given during the afternoon. One of the features of the day was the serving of stuffed prunes. These prunes were the "big ad" of the day and the idea one that could be repeated with much effect.

The Bulletin: The automobile parade was a remarkable demonstration of the way Santa Clara people do things. There were miles and miles of autos, all loaded with smiling, happy visitors, and the machines decorated with beautiful blossoms. They stretched along Market street for many blocks, and many was the cheer that was given the visitors as they drove gaily along.

Assuredly Santa Clara set a pace that it will be hard for other counties to equal. It was an outpouring that must have impressed every guest within the city, as well as old residents, of the beauties that are grown in the neighboring valley, both human and floral, and the unity with which the people of that section act when they decide to accomplish a given thing.

Campbell, the home of the apricot and the prune, was well represented both with autoists and hikers. Altho the big day was about three days in advance of the apricot blossoms there were quantities of other flowers, such as acacia, almonds, quince and a few peaches.

The Santa Clara County Editorial association took this occasion for its annual banquet which was postponed a month. The members met at the Press building at noon and took luncheon at "Old Faithful Inn."

After luncheon, the party visited the spouting geysers and the caves. Mr. Buck kindly conducted the party into a number of concessions on the zone which were very instructive and entertaining. Probably the most wonderful and awe-inspiring production on the Zone is the "Creation" which is a marvelous creation by man and should not be passed by. The Monitor and Merrimac fight and the Battle of Gettysburg are most real and instructive.

Mr. Crowley gave the party a launch trip on the bay at the mouth of the Golden Gate which was much appreciated.

The view of the Exposition building which was afforded by this trip is most attractive from the bay side.

The party consisted of President and Mrs. W. H. Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Simkins, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Crowl and son, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Smith and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. H. Roth, Miss B. Downing and Mr. T. C. Duffy.

Many of the visitors remained over to see the Vanderbilt Cup race.

Killed by Train

The north bound passenger struck and killed an unknown man at the crossing near the Orchard City Canning Co's. plant Thursday evening. The body was terribly mangled on the left side and the arm almost cut away. The remains were taken to Coroner Kell's offices where an inquest was held. No identification papers were found and the only mark was a laundry sign on the shirt.

The company and engineer were held blameless as the man was not seen in time to avert the accident and it is thought that suicide may have been planned.

The following State Days will be celebrated at the San Diego Exposition on the dates given, according to arrangements completed by the Division of Special Events.

March 22, Michigan; March 29, Minnesota; April 9, Ohio; April 12, Maine; April 13, New Hampshire; April 14, Vermont; April 15, Massachusetts; April 16, Connecticut; April 17, Rhode Island; April 21, Texas; April 26, Oklahoma; April 30, Mississippi; May 3, Nebraska; May 6, Missouri and Montana; May 10, New York; May 17, North Dakota; May 24, North Carolina; May 27, New Jersey.

On visiting the warehouse of the J. C. Ainsley Canning Co., this week the writer was surprised to learn that the Company had shipped practically all of its fruit canned last season. Nearly all of this Company's goods go to England. The work of preparing the plant for the coming season's work will be begun about the first of April.

Fresher than "Fresh" Vegetables

If you were going marketing for fresh vegetables, you would hardly think of directing your steps to the canned goods department of a grocery store, would you? But suppose we should say that our canned string beans, peas, asparagus, and the like are fresher than the average so called "fresh" stock: would you think this a wild statement? Let's look at the fresh vegetable business for a moment. The market gardener gathers his stock today, we'll say, and sends it to the commission house for tomorrow's trade. You buy the stuff about twenty-four hours from the picking—perhaps. It may be forty-eight hours old before you see it. Now, on the other hand, the canneries are right in the fields; the vegetables are gathered, prepared, and go directly into the can—the time from field to cooking is measured in minutes, not hours. When you open that can the contents is as fresh as it's possible for a cooked vegetable to be.

By the way, have you tried one of those 10c cans of ASPARAGUS? They are selling like pink lemonade on circus day.

For the LITTLE ONES

SLEDDING ON SINGLE RUNNER

New Style of Coaster Is Built Great Deal Like Skatemobile—Has an Auxiliary Runner.

A new style of sledding will be introduced during the coming winter, which will no doubt be heartily received, as it promises to be speedier than toboggan or snowshoes. It might be termed a "one-legged sled," for in the main but one runner will be used. While a second one is provided it is only for occasional use.

The new style of sled is built a great deal like the skatemobile, which has been affected by the small boys of the cities, except in that a runner is supplied instead of the small wheels which were made use of by the small boy. The new sled has, besides one log runner or shoe in the center, an auxiliary runner, which is adjustable, and which may be raised out of the way when coasting down grade. The smaller runner is dropped only when the speed declines to the point that the sled refuses to maintain its upright position by reason of its momentum. The new sled will carry one or two persons. The operator stands on the runner and has a convenient handle to hold and to aid him in guiding the machine, which is done largely by swaying the body from one side to the other. The new style of sledding promises to be very exhilarating.

DANGERS OF DOING NOTHING

Every Boy Should Practice Self-Criticism—Idleness Is One of Habits Disclosed.

The harm of doing nothing is seldom realized. But it means going backward. Or, if it means floating along to somewhere, it also means getting soaked and heavy and finally sinking out of sight. Every boy should adopt Secretary Redfield's advice to business men—to practice self-criticism; to find out if anything is the matter, and then correct it, says Ohio State Journal.

We suspect if every boy and girl would undergo a little self-examination they would find idleness was one of their habits. And they are apt also to think it is an innocent habit; but it is not; it is a dangerous habit. Remember the old saying that the devil always finds something for idle hands to do, and that something is evil always.

Now, work is not always struggle with one's hands. It does not always make one perspire and get short of breath. If a person thinks of things that are true, if he builds up noble ideals, if he plans enterprises of good will, if he makes use of his spirit in forming fine resolutions—this is not idling.

The test for idleness is very easy. When one wastes his time he is idle; when he does not utilize thought and deed to make his life better he is idling. Teaching a boy to value his time is the best lesson that can be given him.

German Army's Wireless.

Wireless telegraphy plays an important part in the German army. The thoroughness with which the Germans have adapted the wireless to military use is but another example of their marvelous military efficiency. Portable wireless telegraph outfits have been developed that are far more compact than those in use in other armies of the world. The German field set is carried in either a light automobile or on a motorcycle side car. These short-range outfits will send and receive over an average distance of thirty-five miles.—American Boy.

Good Investment.

If one of the boys on the farm shows a decided talent for tinkering with the machinery around the place, $50 invested in tools and a corner of the barn fixed up as a workshop will not only satisfy his ambition to a great extent but save a lot of money in the repairs that he will make on the farm tools.

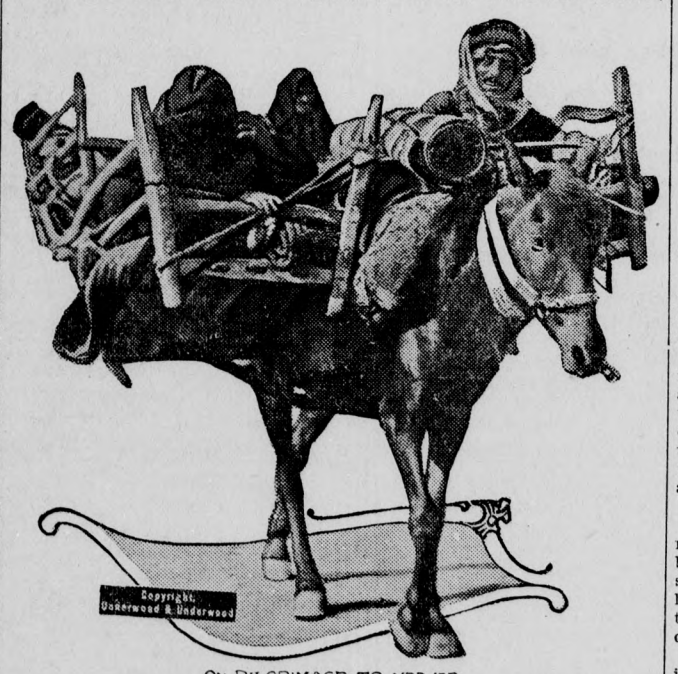
Holy City of the Shias

MYSTIC, buried in the exclusive sands of the desert, almost unknown by the white man, the Arab city of Nedjef, Mecca of the Shia Mohammedans, born of and for a religion, contains within its walls of sun-dried brick a treasure rich beyond fable, the Shia St. Peter's, into which a stream of gold and jewels has poured for centuries, and over the looting of which many an empire-building soldier has sweetened his dreams while sleeping on the battle fields of India and elsewhere in Asia. Nedjef has become hostile land, and the wonderful mosque of gold and precious stones is exposed as a possible objective of invaders. Frederick Simpich, one of the few white men of any race to have made a visit to hidden Nedjef, has transmitted an account of this strangest of cities to the National Geographic society. He writes:

It is five days by mule or camel caravan from Bagdad to Nedjef, and in the eventful centuries since the Shias founded Nedjef—on the spot where a nephew of the Prophet Mohammed was slain—it is estimated that over 25,000,000 Moslems have made the pilgrimage to this mysterious desert city of golden domes, fabulous treasures, and weird rites. Thousands of devotees from the Shia hordes of India, Persia and South Russia flock through Bagdad each year, bringing with them their mummified dead—salted and dried—for burial in the holy ground about the mystic city.

All Seek Burial There.

Each member of the Shia sect must make the pilgrimage to this holiest of his shrines, the city toward which throughout life he bows in worship, the unnatural city bound up in the desert's spell, into which the treasures of all his fellows in faith are flowing for their spiritual welfare. Each member of the Shia sect expects to be buried in the sacred earth without the city's walls, where millions upon millions of past Shias have turned the sands to clay. This enormous graveyard about the city is not the least part of its weird fascination. The desert trail to the sacred city is empty, barren and dead. It is an unattractive trail whose silence is broken only by fanatic pilgrims and by caravans transporting corpses to the Shia Mecca of the dead.



ON PILGRIMAGE TO NEDJEF

Nedjef is a great city. Not a green thing—a plant, shrub, or tree—lives within its dry, hot limits. It is built on a high plain of soft sandstone. The narrow, crooked streets, in many places mere passages three or four feet wide, wind like jungle paths. One of the strange features of this strange city is its cellars. In summer the fierce heat drives the panting people deep down into the earth, like rats in a hole. Beneath every house is a cellar, burrowed mine-like to amazing depths; one I explored reached an astoundingly low level, being more than one hundred feet below the street.

Cellars as Refuges From Heat.

Into these damp, dark holes the Shias flee when the scorching desert air sizzles above and imported German thermometers stand at 130 degrees F. Some of the cellars are arranged in a tier of cells or rooms, one below the other; the upper room is used in the first hot months, the family going lower down as the heat increases. Many of these cellars are connected by underground corridors, and the criminals, who swarm in Nedjef, easily elude capture by passing through these tunnels from house to house.

The mosque is covered with great gold tiles which run to its very base. For ages the rich of Shia faith have made precious presents to this temple, until its vaults are bursting with pent-up treasure. The city has no industry, no commerce—nothing that is apart from its religious purpose. It supports itself upon the money of the pilgrims, lodges them, feeds them, robs them, sells them prayer bricks made from the graveyard clay, and even marries them for the period of their visit to perennial brides, brides kept in stock, who legally have many husbands in their lives.

A British Indian army officer told me that the looting of the Nedjef mosque was a favorite dream of the soldiers in the middle East, who looked forward to the day when war may sweep an army of invasion into Nedjef.

Something About Caucasia.

Concerning Caucasia, where the Turks and the Russian are renewing that long ago conflict that has existed between the Turk and the Muscovite, the National Geographic society issued the following statement:

Caucasia is a potpourri of races, tongues and religions. Nowhere else in the world can one find on a similar area so many types of peoples, so many languages and dialects, so many religions and sects thereof. The Caucasus mountains, for the most part, stretch above fruitful land, and every folk-stream which flowed their way has left eddies within their closed, world-isolated valleys.

The cosmopolitanism of New York is provincial compared with the magnificent, regardless confusion of Caucasian peoples. There are some seventy dialects strange to the West spoken within its boundaries, while business, touring, engineering and other techniques bring most of the other languages in. In this modern Babel dwell Georgians, Imeritians, Chevsurs, Lazes, Mingrelians, Pshavs, Swanitians, Abkhasians, Circassians, Kebardians, Ossetes, Avars, Chechinzes, Jews, Russians of several varieties, Daigs, Lesghians, Kazy-Kumyksh, Tush, Ingush, Greeks and others of the Occident. Caucasia, indeed, may be said to be a place preeminently devoted to language—all kinds and complexions of speech being native there in bewildering richness.

Between Black and Caspian Sea.

Caucasia is the broad, stocky isthmus which, extending from the southeast corner of Europe to Asia, divides the Black and Caspian seas. Its area is about 180,000 square miles, or more than four times larger than the state of Ohio. It has good ports upon both the Black and Caspian seas, Batum on the one, and Baku on the other. The famous Apsheron peninsula is one of the richest of the world's oil fields, and, in general the Caucasus is the mineral treasury of all the Russias. The grain, grazing and fruit lands of this government are very bountiful and could be turned into the richest of garden and farming spots with a little modern care. Coal is produced. Among the ores now mostly developed for commerce are copper, manganese, mercury, sulphur, iron, cobalt and salt.

Europe's barrier against southeastern Asia, the Caucasus range stretches across the middle lands of Caucasia, dividing the government into Ciscaucasia and Transcaucasia. In the mountainous central region is to be found some of the most beautiful scenery in the world.

The population of Caucasia is mostly agricultural in its pursuits. It is backward and for the most part, beyond an abundance of grains and fruits, has no other desires. Naturally, therefore, the industries of modern life have only made negligible beginnings.

THE HIGH JUMPER

By GEORGE ELMER COBB.

A vivid scream rang out upon the still afternoon air, just as Ross Evans turned from a side street into a blind thoroughfare which lost itself among the rock heaps of the canal. His was a quick eye, and within the space of a second its glance took in details of excitement and peril that thrilled him.

What he saw was a young girl dashing frantically down the middle of the road, a square distant. In advance of her, coming full bent at top speed was an automobile, and clinging to its seat was a golden haired little child of about seven years. Her face was devoid of color, her lips parted in horror, her eyes distended. Young as she was, the little one seemed to fully realize her frightful peril. In a flash Ross fancied he comprehended the merits of the situation. The child had probably accidentally started up the machine while alone in its charge, was ignorant as to handling the mechanism and was powerless to stay its mad flight.

"Save her! save her!" shrieked the young lady in wild pursuit of the runaway machine. Even at the distance Ross was away from her the agonized accents rang out clearly.

Ross Evans, once high jump champion of a noted athletic organization, nerved himself mightily, at the inspiration of old time campus ardor and the call of humanity. Death and destruction hovered. The fated machine was headed for an end to its career less than thirty seconds ahead. There was one way only to hope to stay its course, a way full of danger and sacrifice. He took it.

Calculating to the closeness of a single watch tick, he braced for a run.

Coming at Top Speed Was an Automobile.

Magnificently, as though it were a test spring for a field prize, he rose to meet the coming monster of speed.

Ross just cleared the edge of the machine. He landed in the seat, one arm striking the brass casing of the wind shield and numbing it. Then, quick as light he shot the reverse button, with a shuddering glance at the yawning pit, now not twenty feet away, and the gasping words.

"Just in time!"

It was truly so, yet with superb coolness of nerve he swung the machine back, fronting the advancing girl, spoke a reassuring word to the now huddled and sobbing child, sprang to the ground and awaited the approach of the young lady.

She came towards him pale, tottering, on the verge of swooning, an advancing vision of grace and beauty. His eyes feasted upon all her girlish daintiness of dress and innocence of face, the pitiful appeal of frightened eyes and quivering lips. Then, as she swayed in utter collapse, Ross glided swiftly to her side and caught her pliable form in his strong arms, just in time to save her from sinking to the ground.

She was helpless, held sheltering against his broad breast, the contact thrilling him, the world and all else it contained to him a worthless bauble, could he but sweep with his own those full tempting lips. Only for an instant, however, the eyes closed. She roused to still cling to him, but braced to battle her agitation, that she might breathe out her gratitude incoherently and hastening to the machine to seize the rescued one, her sister, Ross surmised, she pressed her to her bosom in outspoken gladness.

She had carried a little hand bag, and this had fallen open to the ground when she had swooned momentarily. As Ross picked it up to restore it to her, he noted her calling cards and the name upon them: "Nellie Moore." He restored the hand bag to her and lifted his hat. She swept his handsome face with a searching look, as though glad to believe that true nobleness of soul lay behind that courageous nature. Again and again she thanked him, was sure she was able eo operate the machine, and made ready to drive away.

"No, no, come here!" cried out the peremptory little miss whose life had been saved, and she beckoned eagerly to Ross.

"What is it, little one?" he smiled.

For reply the eyes of the child grew earnest and humid. She did not speak, but reaching out she placed a soft chubby hand on either cheek, drew him toward her and kissed him on the lips. Then, still holding him, she added with an inquiring glance at her sister:

"And one for dear Nellie, too?"

The fair maiden blushed deeply, but did not gainsay the edict. Again Ross Evans lifted his hat courteously. A bright episode in his life faded away as the machine disappeared, leaving him standing there, his heart warmed and thrilling. He watched the automobile till it turned the next corner, responded to a little hand waving towards him and uttered something of a sigh.

The glimpse of apparent wealth, luxury and social distinction contrasted vividly with his own present condition. A company whose mechanical engineer he had been for some years had failed. He was fairly stranded, and the prospects ahead dubious.

As Ross started to leave the spot he paused to pick up a small glittering object that attracted his gaze.

"A bent nickel," he soliloquized, glancing at it with only casual interest.

It had a slight mark where some heavy force had driven it out of shape. Two initials were scratched across its face—"A. B." Ross placed it in his pocket and for a moment thought no more of it.

Two days later, however, Ross Evans treasured the disfigured coin as though it were a precious talisman. He was not given to foolish superstition, but from the hour that he picked up that nickel the tide of fortune seemed to turn. He chanced to help a crippled old man over a crowded street crossing. It led to an acquaintanceship. The man was a contractor. He took a liking to Ross. His frank, intelligent ways attracted him. Ross was empoyed to take charge of some important construction work in a neighboring city. From then on he was sure of a lucrative established position. It pleased his fancy to believe that the meeting with the fair girl he had not forgotten, and his finding the coin were harbingers of continued prosperity. He cherished the fond memory of the first, and stowed the bent nickel securely inside his watch case.

It was about a month later when Ross, returned to Everdem to report to his employer, chancing to pick up a local paper at the hotel read the following remarkable advertisement:

"Lost, reward—$1,000 will be paid to the finder of a bent nickel marked 'A. B.' one month since. Miss Nellie Moore, 905 Benson Terrace."

Speedily Ross was on his way to the fair advertiser, not thinking of any reward save a look at her bonny face. He was not embarrassed with threadbare attire this time. He was in appearance fully what he was—a gentleman.

She welcomed him with surprise, but as well with honest pleasure shining in her bright eyes. Then she explained. The nickel must have fallen out of her hand bag at the time of the accident. She had that day taken it from her uncle's safe to have a gold receptacle made for it, for it was a treasured memento in the family.

It had stopped the course of a bullet at a time when her uncle was a victim to drink. He had reformed, and treasured the coin as a memento of evil days now fully redeemed.

Of course Ross declined any reward. As he was about to depart, little Lois bounded into the room to greet him as if he were a familiar friend.

"Then you have not forgotten me?" smiled Ross.

"Oh, dear, no! nor sister either—I'll show you."

And taking up a sketch book she showed a drawing, a very fair presentment of himself.

Nellie blushed and tried to prevent the exhibition of it, but Ross had seen —and hoped.

And hope brought deeper love, and that was refined into a mutual affection that kept the cherished bent nickel in the family.

The Congressional Library.

The vastness of the congressional library is shown by a recent report to congress in which it is shown that the library contains 2,125,255 books, 135,323 maps and charts, 630,799 volumes and pieces of music and 360,949 prints. The books added in the previous year amounted to 136,720 and an extension of the library is asked for with racks for 800,000 more books. The library has an average of 2,454 visitors and readers during each day of the year and yet the place seems never crowded at any one time. Since the location of the Union station on its present site many travelers with an hour to spare between trains avail themselves of the opportunity to visit this beautiful building, while it is the favorite haunt for those who are students of music, literature or art and love to pore over its priceless treasures. — Harper's Weekly.

Rural Waggery.

"Ira Beasore drove into town just before the big rain the other day and he saw Orio Tuttle setting tubs and barrels under all the spouts around his house," says Tully Marshall. "So Ira pulls up and 'hollers' at Orio:

"'Hey, Orio! What ye doin'?'

"'Looks like rain, an' I'm settin' out these tubs so's the woman can have some soft water fer her washin' Monday,' answers Orio, all innocent like, and not thinking about what a great codder Ira is.

"'Sho!' says Ira. 'You won't git no soft water.'

"'Why won't I?'

"''Cause it's goin' to rain hard. Haw-haw-haw! Git ep!'"—Young's Magazine.

ADVISED TO TURN HER BACK

Great Detective Was Not Long in Finding Reason for Clock Stopping While Woman Faced It.

The great detective put down the iced tea hypodermic needle and looked closely at his visitor.

With one lightning glance, he noticed that she was cross-eyed on both sides, especially the right; pugnosed, hare-lipped, freckled, and that her chin was so receding as to look almost ashamed of its presence there at all.

"You say," he remarked thoughtfully, "that your eight-day clock stops unaccountably in spite of its guaranty?"

"Absolutely in spite of it," she replied. "When I take it to the jeweler's it goes all right, but as soon as I bring it home again, it stops. It's not because I don't wind it, for it's right after I wind it that it generally stops. Baffling, isn't it? I should say so! It's my favorite clock and I can't rest until I find out the cause."

"Well—ah—" began the great detective, crossing his arms and at the same time uncrossing his legs so as not to give himself the double cross. "Well, do you—ah—look straight at the clock when you wind it?"

"Why, yes. I stare right at it, of course!"

Again the great detective took a lightning survey of the homeliest woman that had ever crossed his threshold.

"Madam," he said at length, "I advise you to try winding it with your back to it. No special reason, of course. I merely deduct that it's that kind of a clock. No fee."

Sharp Practice.

Young Clerk—The boss has gone crazy. He is advertising $10 lace at a cent a yard.

Letting Her Down.

Another of the series of experiments to determine the resisting power of a certain class of armor was recently conducted with extremely satisfactory results. Fortifications built of this metal might be made indestructible and it would be useless to bombard them.

It is also useless to try to make a success in life if handicapped by poor health. You lack the strength and stamina necessary to win.

In the majority of cases of poor health, stomach trouble is the real cause; but this can be corrected by careful diet and the assistance of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It tones, strengthens and helps the digestive functions and when the food is properly digested, strength and renewed vigor is sent coursing through the entire system.

The proper time for action is when you notice the first symptoms of weakness, such as loss of appetite, headache, bloating, heartburn, sour stomach, indigestion or constipation and by resorting to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters you can help Nature conquer them. Delay only aggravates matters and prolongs your suffering.

The Honor of the Boy Scout.

The most important scout virtue is that of honor. Indeed, that is the basis of all scout virtues and is closely allied to that of self-respect. When a scout promises to do a thing on his honor, he is bound to do it. The honor of a scout will not permit of anything but the highest and the best and the manliest. A POTATO ROMANCE

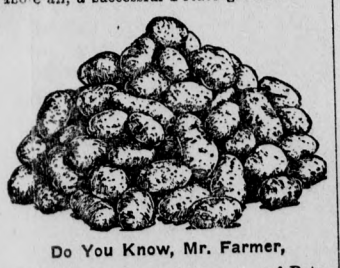
"If I were a farmer boy, or a boy without capital, and wanted an early competency, I'd start right out growing Potatoes," said Henry Schroeder, the Potato king of the Red River Valley, whose story in the John A. Salzer Seed Co.'s Catalogue reads stranger than a romance.

That advice of Mr. Schroeder's, the self-made Potato king, comes from a warm heart, a level head, an active hand, and above all, a successful Potato grower!



Do You Know, Mr. Farmer,

there is more money in five acres of Potatoes year in and year out than in anything you can grow on your farm, and the growing of Potatoes now, with present machinery, etc., is easy. It's regular Fourth of July fun!

New Coal-Cutter.

Revolutionary changes in coal-mining methods are promised upon the general introduction of a coal-mining machine developed by a Pittsburgh mining and mechanical engineer, who has spent more than ten years in perfecting the machine.

The device, constructed of structural steel, can attack the coal seam in any position, moving up or down or in any direction. It takes out more than 90 per cent of the coal in the ground, whereas the best practice of today seldom recovers more than 70 per cent. It is stated that under all sorts of tests, running over many months, the machine has demonstrated that it can cut the cost of mining coal by half.

It is said that with only twenty men attending the machines, ten of them can produce over 1,000 tons of coal a day. Electricity or compressed air can be used, and so little power is required that the cost of power is less than one per cent a ton for each ton of coal mined.

STOP COUGHING

Mr. Andor Kiss, No. 318 Clinton Place, Kansas City, Mo., writes: "I cannot thank you enough for being cured. For seven long years I doctored steadily for my catarrh and cough, which cost me hundreds of dollars. But my catarrh grew worse all the time. Even though I was under the treatment of some of the most famous doctors, I still had a terrible cough and thought sometimes that I would choke. I could get no air. I then bought a bottle of Peruna, and that evening and all night my wife gave it to me according to the directions, and I felt better the following day already. Three days later I felt much improved, and today, after the use of the fourth bottle, I feel entirely cured. I can conscientiously recommend this grand medicine to every citizen."

Bladder Trouble Causes Terrible Pains

After taking a trial bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root which you forwarded to me, I purchased some from a local drug store and after using three dollar bottles I can truthfully say that I was cured of all the terrible pains I had in my back, side and head, caused by bladder trouble. I had the worst kind of kidney trouble and suffered so that I could not even stay in bed with the pain. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root made me feel just like a new person and I am glad to recommend it to anyone suffering as I did.

Very truly yours,
MISS MARY ARDNER,
807 Washington St. Defiance, Ohio.

He Had It.

In honor of a visit to his plant by the governor of the state an automobile manufacturer once had a complete car assembled in something like seven minutes. Some weeks later, after this feat was heralded in the daily papers, the phone rang vigorously. "Is it true that you assembled a car in seven minutes at your factory?" the voice asked. "Yes," came the reply. "Why?" "Oh, nothing," said the calm inquirer, "only I've got the car."

TOUCHED BY ROYAL APOLOGY

Great Painter Appreciated Act of English Prince, Afterward King William IV.

Audacity irresistibly attracts us, and the man of strong, original character is an object of universal interest.

In the economy of his household, James Northcote, the English portrait painter, was sordid, yet lords and ladies not a few assembled in his ill-furnished, ill-arranged and ill-swept studio when an exceedingly popular young actor sat to him. The favorite was conveyed by the duke of Clarence (afterward William IV) to Argyll place in his own carriage, and his royal highness lingered to see the progress of the work—and probably to study the painter.

"The loose gown in which he painted," says one of Northcote's biographers, "was principally composed of shreds and patches, and might perchance be half a century old; his white hair was sparingly bestowed on each side, and his cranium was entirely bald.

"The royal visitor, standing behind him while he painted, first gently lifted, or rather twitched, the collar of the gown, which Northcote resented by suddenly turning and expressing his displeasure by a frown; on which his royal highness, touching the professor's gray locks, said:

"'You don't devote much time to the toilet, I perceive.'

"'Sir,' the painter instantly replied, 'I never allow anyone to take personal liberties with me; you are the first that ever presumed to do so; and I beg your royal highness to recollect that I am in my own house.'

"The artist resumed his painting; the prince stood silent for a minute or so, then opened the door, and went away. The royal carriage, however, had not arrived, and rain was falling; the prince returned, borrowed an umbrella, and departed.

"'Dear Mr. Northcote,' said one of the ladies, 'I fear you have offended his royal highness.'

"'Madam,' said the painter, 'I am the offended party.'

"The next day, about noon, Mr. Northcote was alone, when a gentle tap was heard, the studio door opened, and in walked the prince.

"'Mr. Northcote,' he said, 'I am come to return your sister's umbrella; I brought it myself, that I might have an opportunity of saying that yesterday I thoughtlessly took an unbecoming liberty with you, which you properly resented. I really am angry with myself, and hope you will forgive me, and think no more of it.'

"'And what did you say?' inquired a friend to whom the painter told the story.

"'Say!' repeated Northcote. 'What could I say? I only bowed; he might see what I felt. I could at that moment have sacrificed my life for him. Such a prince is worthy to be a king.'"

The prince afterward, in his bluff manner said, "He's an honest, independent little old fellow."—Youth's Companion.

Cows Were Intoxicated.

On a report that nine cows in Colchester, Conn., were infected with the hoof-and-mouth disease, a veterinarian was sent immediately to investigate. After examining the cows the veterinarian reported that they were merely intoxicated. A probable explanation for their condition was that they had eaten too many apples.

The smallest cows in the world are found in the Samoan islands. The average weight does not exceed 150 pounds, while the bulls weigh about 200 pounds. They are about the size of a Merino sheep.

Good and Evil.

We often try in vain to cut up our errors by the roots, to fight evil hand to hand on its own ground, where it has us at a disadvantage, whereas our most sure way to victory is by developing and fortifying the good that is in us. We have but a certain measure of strength and activity; as much of this as is added to the good is taken from the evil.—Mme. Swetchine.

Most Skin Trouble Readily Overcome

The Active Principle of a Famous Remedy Works Wonders.

Many people have marveled the way S. S. S. overcomes skin troubles. The explanation is the fact that S. S. S. works in the blood and the blood is really a most intricate and extraordinary mass of arteries and veins.

When you come to realize that the skin and the flesh beneath are composed of a network of tiny blood vessels you solve the mystery.

There are wonderful medicinal properties in S. S. S. that follow the course of the blood streams just as naturally as the most nourishing food elements.

It is really a remarkable remedy. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and just insist upon having it. And if you desire skillful advice and counsel upon any matter concerning the blood and skin, write to the Medical Department, The Swift Specific Co., 529 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Do not allow some zealous clerk's eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. to fool you with the same old mineral drugs. Beware of all substitutes. Insist upon S. S. S.

Nature Never Intended Woman to be Sickly

As a matter of fact it is her right and her duty to enjoy perfect health and strength—to be just as strong and healthy as man—perhaps more so—in view of the fact that it is she who brings into the world the offspring.

Every woman can be strong and healthy. Don't resign yourself to a delicate life.

If you suffer from headaches, backaches, nervousness, low spirits, lack of ambition, or have lost all hope of being well again—it's more than an even chance that you will speedily regain your health if you will try

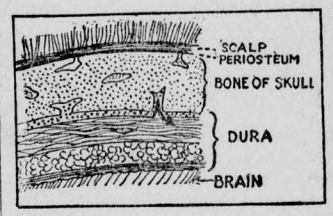
WORSE THAN DEATH

Epilepsy Follows Certain Injuries to Head.

Blow That Causes Unconsciousness for Long Intervals Practically Defies the Best of Surgical Skill, Says Famous Doctor.

"I have often said that I had rather die than receive a blow sufficiently severe to render me unconscious for a considerable period of time," said Dr. John B. Murphy during an operation on the head of a young man who had been suffering from epileptic fits, which came on three years after he had been struck on the head by a baseball and knocked unconscious for about half an hour.



Diagrammatic section of the coverings of the brain to show the dura that is injured by a blow.

"A blow which merely fractures the skull without producing unconsciousness, such as that from a sharp instrument," continued Doctor Murphy, "is not nearly so serious a condition, from the point of view of future possibilities, as that following the blow of a blunt instrument which renders the patient unconscious."

Doctor Murphy went on to cite several cases, one of a man who had been thrown from a sleigh against a telegraph pole and remained unconscious for three weeks. He had no further symptoms for about three years, when he began having convulsions. Another was that of a young man who had fallen from a window to a stone pavement when a baby. His "fits" did not begin until twenty years later, and he had been a precocious boy at school and a successful business man.

Doctor Murphy believes that such blows cause an injury to that coating of the brain which is called the dura. The brain itself is uninjured. Then something arises—worry or extra hard work or something of that sort—which brings on irritation where the dura was injured. The precise cause is uncertain.

Some of these cases can be cured by an operation in which the skull is opened and the dura at the place of injury removed, but only about one case in twenty gets well and stays well. That is why Doctor Murphy would rather be killed outright than suffer such an injury. For the victim is almost certainly destined to become an epileptic.

The home merchant. Who is he?

He is the chap who gives you credit when you are financially broke, and carries your account until you are able to pay.

He is the chap who gives you back your money or makes exchanges when you are not satisfied with what you have bought.

He is the chap who stands behind his guaranty, and makes restoration of all losses that you may sustain on the goods you buy.

He is the chap who meets you at the door with a handshake, and lets you out with a message to the "kids," and a real come-again good-by.

He is the chap who meets and greets you on the street every day in the year, and takes a neighborly interest in your family and your affairs.

He is the chap whose clerks and bookkeepers and other employes live in Palo Alto and spend their money with you and with other home people.

He is the chap who pays heavy taxes to help support our schools, and build our streets, and maintain our fire department and parks.

He is the chap who helps support local churches and hospitals and charity organizations, and Palo Alto lodges and commercial clubs, and talks for Palo Alto and boosts for our town every day in the year.

He is the chap who visits you when you are sick, sends flowers to your family when you die, and follows your body out among the trees and tombs, as far as human feet may travel with the dead.

He is the home merchant—your neighbor—your friend—your helper in times of need.

Don't you think that you ought to trade with him and be his friend and his helper in the time of his need?

Don't you know that every dollar that you send out of Campbell for merchandise is sent to strangers—to men who never spend a dollar in Campbell to men who would not trust you for a box of matches, to men who would turn you over to the police if you should enter their offices?

You don't save much, frequently nothing, when you send your money out of Campbell, and you take all the risk yourself of short weight or measure and of getting damaged or inferior goods. And don't you know that the growth and prosperity of Campbell depend very largely upon the success and prosperity of the home merchants? Out-of-town people judge our city by the appearance of our stores and the degree of enterprise shown by our merchants. And our home merchants cannot succeed unless home folks give them loyal support.—Contributed.

Fine Record

The pride of Campbell, our husky basket ball team, has laid aside its paraphernalia for the season with almost a perfect record. The team went down to but one defeat and that given them by the champions of this part of the state, San Mateo. The list of scores follows:

Wheat Following Millet.

Millet leaves the soil in shape to produce a better crop of wheat. At the North Dakota station it has been found that the three crops of wheat following millet produced sixteen and one-quarter bushels more wheat than the three crops of wheat following wheat.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Now is a good time to cut and make firewood of dead or dying trees on the lawn or in the windbreak.

Cabbage and root crops trenched outside need careful watching to see that frost does not get through the covering.

A newspaper wrapped about a geranium or other house plant these cold nights will often save it from being frosted.

Look at the celery stored in the cellar. It may need more water. Do not wet the foliage, but apply water to the roots.

A good method of cleaning the foliage of house plants is frequently to tip the plant bottom side up in soapy water. Immerse the plant clear to the pot for fifteen minutes or more, then cleanse in clean water.

When watering house plants it is a good plan to set the pot in water until the soil is thoroughly wet, then drain and do not water again till water is needed. Small amounts of water, applied frequently, often do more harm than good. Water thoroughly when water is needed.

Moscow's Big Hospital.

More than 900 nurses are employed in the Moscow hospital, the largest in Europe.

THE American is a great lover of sweets. He consumes $1,000,000 worth of sugar daily. Over half of this large quantity of sugar is of foreign production. This country should be able to make its own sugar and the industry should be encouraged. Home sugar would mean work for thousands of men. At present Cuba can't get it to us as readily as before the war and Mr. Consumer must pay the extra raise in freight, an advance of 10 cents per hundred to 30 cents per hundred.

THE LOS GATOS MAIL has a new Editor at the throttle and may his run be as successful and pleasant as his predecessor's. A. B. Smith, who has been editor and proprietor for the past sixteen years has sold his Mail and mailing list to E. A. Falch of Auburn. Mr. Smith, one of the most popular of the county editors, has been one of the ever-faithful members of the County Association for years. Ever cheerful and humorous, his presence has always been desired at the gatherings of the scribes. We'll miss you Alphabet, and hope for your return to the fold.

ONE of the largest steel concerns of Pittsburg, the Electro Steel Company, recently refused to bid on a big war offer. Blue prints which were furnished were returned and a most significant note attached, which read: "For humanitarian reasons, this company finds itself obliged to refuse to consider the contract." The value of this contract offered was estimated at $450,000. Think of it! When such concerns refuse to furnish impliments of war, it is a sign of better things to come, and if every firm in America should refuse to furnish anything to the waring nations, peace would not be far distant.

Home Talent Program

MARCH 16, 1915.

The last number of the course of entertainments given by the Epworth League will be Tuesday, March 16th. This will be a varied program of home talent specialities. Home Talent entertainments are always a drawing card and this will be something unusually good and will introduce to the Campbell public some new features. The other numbers were especially pleasing, so do not forget this one. Come and bring your friends.

Moreland Notes

Moreland Community held a Mass Meeting at the Club Hall Wednesday evening and, after a free discussion, passed a resolution asking the School Trustees to call a special tax election to vote on a $1000 tax for improvement of the school property. Short talks were made by the trustees and Supt. Bateman.

A short program was given during the evening. Miss Hale gave several clever reading selections followed by music sung by some of the school children. A male quartet, Messrs. Alex. Adam, E. E. Lanphear, H. C. Smith and C. P. Herrington of Campbell gave several old time songs which were well received.

Light refreshments of sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee were served at the close of the meeting by the Moreland Ladies' Club.

The Club will hold one of its delightful dances and social evenings at the Moreland Hall this evening.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Moreland Good Will Club was held at the home of Mrs. Lee Hiatt on Payne avenue, March 3rd. The new officers are: Mrs. Harry Baehr, president; Mrs. Mark P. Smith, vice-president; Mrs. Levi Anderson, secretary; Mrs. A. A. McBride, treasurer.

A Statement

Editor Press.

In the report of the meeting held under the auspices of the Home and School Club to discuss the proposed bond issue for a new school house the few remarks that I made in response to the request for opinions "both for and against," were given in such a shape that it is evident my meaning was totally misunderstood and since its publication I have been sharply criticised by some of my friends and neighbors who demand how I came to make such a "mistake." The more so that the points I touched on were not entirely original with me but were compiled from conversations held with various voters and tax payers with whom I had talked at various periods but who personally prefered to do their principal talking on election day. In order to set myself right with them I wish to recapitulate the points that I intended to make and one or two more that have been suggested since and ask the courtesy of their publication.

I am not against a bond issue for necessary school purposes but while the cost of living is engaged in its present up to date aviation stunts and the means of reaching such cost are scarcer than the proverbial "chick a biddy's incisors, molars and bi-cuspids" we frequently have to consider carefully whether it is wise to increase our own expenditnres more that it is positively necessary and should be still more careful how we deal with the public purse.

There is no doubt but that we need more school facilities and we are all willing to provide them in reason but that is not saying that we are in favor of a very large expensive building and a large bond issue to pay for it, nor that we, at this stage of the game, are in favor of one certain plan, however excellent. I have seen a good deal of building and have not noticed any hurry when a man wishes to build on his own money. He generally weighs and considers carefully several plans before deciding. I have no doubt that this will be the case here but there are several suggestions that I consider good which I think they should be brought before the public. One of these I mentioned in my remarks, that the work be done by our own mechanics. It is quite a common thing in communities for it to be required that all employees shall be residents of the place where the work is to be done. I have even heard it advocated that all teachers should live in the town where they teach. Then the bonds, whether of a large issue to build a new school house or a smaller one to repair or enlarge the old one might be issued in small denominations so that a person of small means might invest in them. A contract to do the work might also be let in such away as to allow a small contractor to bid on it. Instead of letting it in one large "blanket" variety, split it up into parts. In an up to date community, such as ours, men will be found who can handle this work I am sure and these suggestions may be superfluous on my part, as such may be the intention of the people in charge but as suggestions have been called for I have taken the liberty of embodying those I have heard and hope to get them before the public.

Methodist Church Notes

Roll Call date for this year is April 9th.

Miss Laura Dunning who has charge of the League meeting this week, was received into full membership in the church last Sunday.

The attendance at the League meeting the last three Sundays has been 66, 89, and 109, respectively. Let us keep it above 100 for the rest of this quarter.

Our Annual District Meeting will be held Tuesday and Wednesday at Los Gatos. Any of the members of the local church will be welcome at any of the sessions, the presence of official members being especially desired.

Mr. Lloyd will preach Sunday morning, and in the evening will give another of the series of addresses on "Prison Reform." The discussion this time will be of "Convict Character or Criminal Characteristics."

The monthly business meeting of the Sunday-School Board will be held at the close of Prayer Meeting Wednesday evening.

The regular business meeting of the Ladies' Aid will be held at Mrs. Cramer's Thursday afternoon.

Remember the Cottage Meeting at the Waite home on South Second street this (Friday) evening.

A scarf pin and a fountain pen have been found in the church and can be had by applying to the janitor or the pastor.

Conklin's self-fillers write right. See them at Smith's.

Congregational Church

"The Friendly Church just around the Corner."

The theme for Sunday morning will be "Pilate, The Shifty," in the series of morning messages on "The Builders of the Cross." From the Cross of the Christ there issues a penetrating power. Those who touched this tragedy of the world did so only to have their characters discovered, the secret of their soul shown. The things which gave shape to their conduct were unveiled.

Talk to the boys and girls on "The Power of Little things." Sunday-school and C. E. as usual. We are hoping to have Miss Brewer with us in the evening. Miss Brewer has just returned from a trip around the world in the interest of Missions. She is reported to be one of the most charming speakers in her line.

You and your friends are most cordially invited to worship with us.

Back to the Land

There are too many "dreamers and thinkers"
And not enough tillers of soil;
There are too many eaters and drinkers
Who use up the products of toil;
There are too many boosters and boomers,
With manners too easy and bland;
We're cursed with too many consumers
We ought to go back to the land.

There are too many getters and takers
And not enough men who produce,
There are too many broad rolling acres
Untouched and untilled—out of use.
We stick where the grime and the grit is,
And the streets with the poor are a-swarm;
We're crowded too much in the cities,
We ought to go back to the farm.

We've got to be workers and plowers,
Who sweat in the fields like true men;
We've got to make use of our powers
To make the land blossom again.

What, me on a farm? And to stay there?
Well, not for a bundle of pelf!
I was trying to show you the way there,
But I'll stick to the city myself.
